Thank You, Ken...

Welcome to this UMS performance! We are delighted that you are joining us in our 138th season, a season that is bittersweet for the UMS staff and family; UMS President Ken Fischer will retire at the end of June, following 30 years of leadership and service to UMS, the University of Michigan, and to our community.

Ken has fostered a culture of openness, honesty, and out-of-the-box thinking at UMS - a supportive professional environment that can be measured in part by the 21-year average tenure of the UMS management team.

Beyond Ken's lasting contributions to UMS, which include an organizational commitment to Education and an increased focus on commissioning new work, Ken has had an impact that isn't always apparent outside of the organization. His dedication to mentorship and service is vast, and includes hosting weekend tours to prospective University students interested in the arts; tirelessly serving on boards of directors within the arts industry regionally, nationally, and internationally; and generously offering his time and knowledge in connecting others.

He has achieved some of the highest recognitions in our field, including the 2016 Chamber Music America Richard J. Bogomolny National Service Award, the 2011 Association of Performing Arts Presenters Fan Taylor Distinguished Service Award, and UMS's recognition as a 2014 National Medal of Arts recipient. From the Vienna Philharmonic concerts led by Leonard Bernstein in 1988, to the first Royal Shakespeare Company residency in 2001, through the remounting of Einstein on the Beach in 2012, Ken has held true to his lifelong motto: "Everybody In, Nobody Out."

Ken, we wish you all of the best in the final few months of your tenure. Thank you for all that you've done for our community!

Tradition Builds the Future

In our 138th season, we continue to showcase traditional performances alongside contemporary artists for an offering that is unlike anything available in the Midwest. UMS grew from a group of local members of the University and townspeople in the 1870s who gathered together for the study of Handel's Messiah. Led by Professor Henry Simmons Frieze and conducted by Professor Calvin Cady, the group assumed the name The Choral Union. Many Choral Union members were also affiliated with the University, and the University Musical Society was established soon after in December 1880.

Since that first season, UMS has expanded greatly and now presents the very best from a wide spectrum of the performing arts: internationally renowned recitalists and orchestras, dance and chamber ensembles, jazz and global music performers, and contemporary stagework and classical theater. Through educational programming, the commissioning of new works, youth programs, artist residencies, and collaborative projects, we continue to strengthen our reputation for artistic distinction and innovation.

Leadership Donors

We recognize the donors who have made multi-year campaign commitments of $100,000 or more during the last year.

Snapshots of History...In 1800:

- · The US Library of Congress is founded in Washington, DC
- · Christmas Day first becomes a public holiday on an international scale
- President John Adams becomes the first US President to live in the Executive Mansion (later renamed the White House)

The energy with which the 22-yearold Beethoven threw himself into Viennese music life is truly astounding. As he was leaving his native Bonn for Vienna in 1792, one of his patrons, Count Waldstein inscribed the following in the young man's book of souvenirs: "With the help of assiduous labor you shall receive Mozart's spirit from Haydn's hands," Thus, Waldstein became the first person to mention Haydn, Mozart, and Beethoven in the same breath. The prophecy came true: Beethoven soon became the most talked-about musician in the imperial capital, equally famous as a composer and a pianist, courted by the aristocracy and admired by the public.

Beethoven's first 20 opus numbers, published between 1795 and 1801, cover just about every current genre of instrumental music: two piano concertos; sonatas for solo piano, for violin and piano, for cello and piano; string trios, piano trios, string quartets, quintets, as well as the Septet in E-flat which became the most popular of all his works. There was one significant lacuna in this list, however, and Beethoven began to fill it simultaneously with his work on the Septet: he couldn't fully be an heir of Haydn and Mozart until he wrote a symphony.

There is certainly plenty of Haydn and Mozart in Beethoven's first symphony, finished a few months after his 29th birthday. But the young composer's originality is evident from every bar of the music. Beethoven clearly took over where Haydn and Mozart had left off; and if he remained within the Classical symphonic framework established by his elders (something he would never do again in a symphony), he spoke the inherited language in such an individual way that no contemporary could fail to notice the arrival of a major new voice on the musical scene.

The First Symphony was introduced at the Court Theatre on April 2, 1800. The program was made up entirely of works by Haydn, Mozart, and Beethoven; this was the first time the composers now known as the three Viennese classics appeared together on a concert bill. Right at the beginning of his symphony, the indomitable young man made a gesture that has been cited ever since as a sign of artistic independence. The very first chord of the symphony is one that, instead of establishing the home key as one would expect, immediately destabilizes it and leads away from it. This surprising opening gambit sets the stage for a brilliant movement filled with many more musical surprises.

The second movement, in a gently rocking 3/8 time, uses melodic imitation and other contrapuntal techniques to build up its texture from unaccompanied violins to tutti. Haydn and Mozart left out the trumpets and kettledrums from most of their slow movements. Beethoven chose to retain them, but asked them something they were not often required to do, namely play softly. The pianissimo notes of the trumpets and timpani add an element of mystery.

The third movement is called "Menuetto," but its character is more that of a scherzo: in other words. it is not a dance but one of those witty, humorous fast movements that originated with Haydn but had acquired a special significance for Beethoven since his earliest Viennese works. Beethoven liked to base his scherzos on single musical aestures, often consisting of only two or three notes: the treatment of these gestures was full of surprises. sudden key changes, offbeat accents, and other unexpected events. This delightful movement is no exception. Scherzos also have contrasting sections called trios (as do minuets). The trio of Beethoven's First Symphony is distinguished by its almost total lack of harmonic movement; this stasis contrasts with the hectic pace of the main section.

The last movement starts with another delicious Beethovenian joke. The theme of the movement, which starts with a fast upward scale, is born gradually before our eyes (or ears), as the notes of the scale are piled up, one by one, in a solemn "Adagio" tempo. Once the top note of the scale is reached, the tempo becomes "Allegro molto e vivace," and there is never a moment of rest until the end.

Beethoven

UMS premiere: Chicago Symphony Orchestra and pianist Wilhelm Backhaus conducted by Frederick Stock; May 1922 in Hill Auditorium.

Snapshots of History...In 1806:

- · The British occupy the Cape of Good Hope
- The Lewis and Clark Expedition reaches St. Louis, Missouri, ending a successful exploration of the Louisiana Territory and the Pacific Northwest
- · Noah Webster publishes his first American English dictionary

The first three Beethoven concertos represent a gradual line of evolution, gradually moving away from the Mozartian models and culminating in No. 5, the magnificent "Emperor" Concerto in E-flat Major. No. 4 seems to fall outside that line. It is every bit as revolutionary as the "Emperor," which it preceded by three years; yet its tone is characterized by a unique mixture of cheerfulness and lyricism with occasional touches of mystery. The first movement is gentle yet extremely powerful. The finale is playful and witty vet has its dream-like moments. And in between, there is an "Andante con moto" that doesn't resemble anything Beethoven ever wrote before or after the Fourth Concerto.

The first surprise occurs in the very first measure of the concerto. The usual orchestral introduction is preceded by a piano solo consisting of a few simple chords played almost as if in a dream. The orchestra enters in a different key, eventually finding its way back to G Major. From here on, the succession of themes follows the established conventions, but there are many irregularities in the tonal plan and its harmonic elaboration. One of the many unexpected modulations in the movement leads to an expressive melody played pianissimo in the highest register of the instrument. It makes use of notes that had only recently been added to the keyboard; it is interesting to observe that Beethoven contrasted the extremely high range of the melody with a left-hand accompaniment that is extremely low. The effect is magical.

The second-movement "Andante con moto" is an impassioned dialog between the piano and the strings that seems to cry out for a programmatic explanation. In 1985, musicologist Owen Jander interpreted the movement as "Orpheus in Hades," with Orpheus pleading with the Furies of the Underworld for the life of his wife, Eurydice. Having won Eurydice back, Orpheus broke his vow not to look at her during their way home and lost her forever.

Jander supported his claims by some biographical evidence. An acquaintance of Beethoven's, composer Friedrich August Kanne, was working on an opera based on the Orpheus myth around the time Beethoven composed his concerto. Kanne, who wrote both the libretto and the score of his opera, included a passage where Orpheus and the chorus of the Furies alternate in oneline speeches very much in the manner of Beethoven's piano-string dialog. He also represented the final tragedy in ways that, as Jander demonstrated, are comparable with the truly extraordinary effects in the second half of Beethoven's movement.

Beethoven used some special pianistic devices here that, like the high tessitura in the first movement, were first made possible by the new instrument for which the concerto was conceived. He instructed the pianist to play the entire second movement with the una corda pedal, that is, activating only one of the three strings available for each tone. Unlike modern pianos, the fortepiano of Beethoven's time was able to produce a noticeable shift from one to two and three strings, and this shift greatly enhances the dramatic effect of the movement.

In a gesture Beethoven was particularly fond of, the third-movement "Rondo" starts in the "wrong" key: for several measures, C Major is suggested before the "correct" G Major is established in a clearly audible tonal "switch." The cheerful mood of the movement is occasionally tempered by more serious moments, but the ending, culminating in a vigorous presto, is one of the happiest Beethoven ever wrote.

Like the first movement, the third makes room for a cadenza. Beethoven noted in the score: "The cadenza should be short." In 1809, he wrote down an example of what he had in mind, perhaps at the request of his pupil, Archduke Rudolph, to whom the concerto was dedicated.

With the Ninth, Beethoven created more than a symphony. Almost as soon as it was written, the Ninth became an icon of Western culture for at least two important reasons. Its message affirms the triumph of joy over adversity like no other piece of music has ever done. Its revolutionary form, its unprecedented size and complexity and, above all, the introduction of the human voice in a symphony, changed the history of music forever. The work's import and the means by which it is expressed are both unique: each explains and iustifies the other.

Everything in Beethoven's career seems to have prepared the way for this exceptional composition. It is the culmination of the so-called "heroic style," known from Symphonies No. 3 and 5, among others. But it is also the endpoint of a series of choral works with all-embracing, cathartic, and solemn endings. The series began in 1790 with two cantatas on the death of Emperor Joseph II and the inauguration of Leopold II, respectively; the concluding chorus of the latter begins with the words Stürzt nieder, Millionen (Fall to your knees, ye millions) — a close paraphrase of Schiller's "Ode to Joy," the text Beethoven used in the final movement of the Ninth. The Choral Fantasy is certainly the most direct precursor of the "Choral" Symphony, but let it also be remembered that Beethoven's only opera, Fidelio, contains another quote from Schiller's poem in its final scene: Wer ein holdes Weib errungen... (A man who has found a gracious wife...).

The poem had preoccupied Beethoven since at least 1792: in that year, an acquaintance of the composer's informed Schiller's sister that:

A young man...whose talents are universally praised...proposes...to compose Schiller's Freude, and indeed strophe by strophe. I expect something perfect for as far as I know him he is wholly devoted to the great and the sublime.

AN ODE TO MAGICAL THINKING

by Doyle Armbrust

Maybe we need to try something else. Something drastic.

Since the presidential election, I don't know how it is over in your silo, but in my silo I can't seem to drown out all the partisan squabbling bleeding in from outside. Netflix bingeing has lost its opioid effect and dinner with friends seems to inevitably funnel toward one topic. Engaging isn't working and disengaging isn't, either. It might take a miracle for us to step out of our respective trenches.

Hang on to that thought for a second. My two-year-old can sing the "Ode to Joy." I mean, he's not all, "Freude, schöner Götterfunken..." or anything, but he's solid on the melody because Beethoven, at the apex of his genius, throws down a fully scalar melody to deliver perhaps his most poignant message to his generation (in Europe, anyway) and to all future generations (of the classical persuasion, anyway). And because there's an incredible Muppets sketch of Beaker multi-tracking the tune before characteristically electrocuting himself.

What is that message? It certainly can't be reduced to "Come on, let's all get happy." Joy, says Beethoven...er, Friedrich Schiller... "Your magics join again what custom strictly divided." These flags, these gods, these bumper stickers — their divisiveness dissolves at the arrival of this splendid Daughter of Elysium (a.k.a. Joy). And then the clincher:

Every man becomes a brother, where thy gentle wings abide.

Let that sink in for a moment. Consider the cable news pundit that makes you want to Clorox your ears when you hear them sermonize. Then consider a world in which you greet each other like one of those dog-seeing-its-enlistedowner-after-a-tour-of-duty videos. It sounds absurd, but what, other than something radical, do we have left to try at this point?

Having waited a full three movements before introducing the chorus, Beethoven dishes us a snippet of each before the bass soloist admonishes. "O friends. not these sounds..." The creation of life from the primordial ooze that is the "Allegro ma non troppo," the haymaker of the "Molto vivace," and the soothing allure of the "Adagio molto e cantabile" are not enough. If we're going to stop screaming at each other, stop twitching for our holsters - in the composer's Vienna or in our own republic — it's going to take "songs full of joy." Beethoven is even going to do a Jefferson Bible number on Schiller's poem, cutting out politically-charged lines like "Safety from the tyrant's power" to make sure we don't get distracted by politics from the humanist utopia he's pitching.

It's aspirational, for sure, but not so naïve, it turns out. In his stirring documentary, Following the Ninth, filmmaker Kerry Candaele traces the symphony's reverberations in situations far more desperate than ours. In Chile, General Pinochet locks up and tortures political dissidents - in this case, socialists whose elected government he had overthrown in a military coup - and how did wives and partners of these captives respond? By singing the "Ode to Joy" at the prison walls, infiltrating a dark despair with hope. Or what about the standoff at Tiananmen Square? There, the "An die Freude" was pumped like a pirate radio signal through loudspeakers to revitalize protesters in an impossible stalemate.

Beethoven's score did not, of course, resolve these conflicts. What it achieved was to reveal hope where hope seemed inconceivable.

If sentient in 1989, your memories of the teardown of the Berlin Wall may revolve around David Hasselhoff singing at the Brandenburg Gate, sporting a particularly unfortunate scarf. You may also recall, though, a rousing performance of the Ninth by Leonard Bernstein in which the conductor would make the provocative switcheroo of "Freiheit" (freedom) for the original "Freude" (joy). It was the Cold War, so perhaps allowances must be made, but the visual of a city — literally split by polarized political ideologies — reclaiming its brotherhood is no less powerful for it.

Now back to our shores. There was a fair amount of talk about "walls" in the recent election season, but the one that actually materialized is the one currently carving us up into teams for the world's least amusing game of dodge ball. We can't seem to count on mutual respect or zesty, fact-based debate any longer. It's time for something unusual, absurd even. Something that will make you look over at that gentleman in the row in front of you, the one taking five full minutes to unwrap his butterscotch candy, and think affectionately, "My brother." It's going to take a leap of faith, and it's going to require a killer soundtrack.

Maybe you're here tonight because you read something in the New Yorker about the Budapest Festival Orchestra sounding pretty phenomenal with Richard Goode on the keys. Maybe Beethoven is your jam. Maybe your date is, like, the LeBron James of planning a night out. Whatever the case, since this is probably not your first time experiencing the Ninth Symphony, may I suggest that tonight, you consider this piece beyond its entertainment value.

What if we choose to buy into Beethoven's magical thinking — that there is a joy so profound that it might just bring us back together? You know, in the spirit of trying something drastic.

Doyle Armbrust is a Chicagobased violist and member of the Spektral Quartet and Ensemble Dal Niente. He is a contributing writer for WQXR's Q2 Music, Crain's Chicago Business, Chicago Magazine, Chicago Tribune, and formerly, Time Out Chicago. Thus, all musical and literary roads converge in the Ninth Symphony. In a way, Beethoven was getting ready to write this work all his life. The actual compositional work took about a year and a half, from the summer of 1822 through February 1824.

Beethoven's plans to set Schiller's "Ode to Joy" began to take a new shape in 1816–17, around the time he received a commission for a symphony from the Philharmonic Society of London. At this point, he had two distinct compositions in mind — a new pair of symphonies similar to Nos. 5–6 (1807–08) or 7–8 (1811–12), which had also been conceived in pairs. But the Tenth Symphony never progressed beyond a few sketches. The Ninth remained Beethoven's last work for orchestra.

Even though Beethoven had long planned to set the "Ode to Joy" to music, he long hesitated over whether or not the last movement of a symphony was the proper place for such a setting. After sketching the choral finale, he appears to have had second thoughts and jotted down ideas for a purely instrumental last movement, ideas he later used in his String Quartet in a minor, Op. 132. He felt that the introduction of voices needed special justification: the difficulties he experienced in crossing this particular bridge can be seen from the many stages the introduction went through in the sketches. At one point, for instance, the rejection of the themes from the first three movements was entrusted to a singer (not the cellos and basses as in the final version). The singer, after dismissing the "Scherzo" as Possen ("farce") and the "Adagio" as "too tender," exclaimed: "Let us sing the song of the immortal Schiller!"

In the end, the "song of the immortal Schiller" was set in a form far removed from the original "strophe by strophe" notion Beethoven is supposed to have had back in 1792. He adopted only four of Schiller's eight strophes, freely repeating and rearranging the lines. (Schiller himself had published a revised version of his poem in 1803, and it is that version that Beethoven now used.)

The opening of the symphony, with its open fifths played in mysterious string tremolos (rapid repeated notes), has been described as representing the creation of the world, as the theme emerges from what seems an amorphous, primordial state. There is an atmosphere of intense expectancy; the tension continually grows until the main theme is presented, fortissimo, by the entire orchestra. It is significant that the mysterious opening is immediately repeated, as it will be two more times in the course of the movement, significantly prolonging the sensation of suspense. The main theme is moved into a new key the second time, and into an unexpected one at that. The first movement of a d-minor symphony normally gravitates upward toward F Major. Beethoven chose a descent to B-flat instead (incidentally, B-flat will also be the key of the symphony's slow movement). The "Allegro" follows the outlines of sonata form, but the individual stages of that form do not quite function the usual way. In traditional sonata form (Mozart, for instance), the tensions that build up in the development section are resolved in the recapitulation. In the Ninth Symphony, a tendency present in several works from Beethoven's middle period becomes stronger than ever: the tensions keep increasing to the end. The movement's lengthy coda contains some material of a highly dramatic character; it ends on a climactic point, without a feeling of resolution.

The first movement is followed by a "Scherzo": this order is unusual in symphonies, though not uncommon in chamber music. Beethoven refrained from using the word "scherzo" here, however, because the mood is dramatic rather than playful. It is based on a motif of only three notes, played in turn by the strings, the timpani (specially tuned at an octave instead of the usual fourth), and the winds. The motif is developed in a fugal fashion, with subsequent imitative entrances - this fugal theme appeared in Beethoven's sketchbook as early as 1815. Through the addition of a second theme. contrasting with the first, the scherzo is expanded into a sonata-like structure of considerable proportions. The trio, or middle section, switches from triple to duple meter, and from d minor to D Major, anticipating not only the key of the finale but the outline of the "Ode to Joy" theme as well. For the first time, we reach a haven of peace and happiness that foreshadows the finale. But for the moment, the trio is brushed aside by the repeat of the dramatic "Molto vivace." At the end. Beethoven leads into the trio a second time. but breaks it off abruptly, to end the movement with two measures of octave leaps in unison. According to one commentator, this ending suggests an "open-ended" form that could "move back and forth between scherzo and trio endlessly." In other words, we cannot at this point tell for sure whether the final outcome will be tragic or joyful.

First, there is one more stage to complete: the sublime third-movement "Adagio," one of Beethoven's most transcendent utterances. It has two alternating melodies: one majestic, the other tender. Each recurrence of the first theme is more ornate than the preceding one while the second theme does not change. The movement culminates in a powerful brass fanfare, followed by a wistful epilogue.

We are jolted out of this idyll by what, in 1824, must have counted as the most jarring dissonance ever written. Wagner referred to this sonority as the Schreckensfanfare (fanfare of horror), and, at the opening of the finale, it forcefully suggests that we have arrived at a point where all previous rules break down. We can no longer predict the future on the basis of the past; what follows has absolutely no precedent in the history of music.

In his book on the Ninth Symphony (published by Schirmer in 1995), David Benjamin Levy interprets the finale as a four-movement symphony in its own right that mirrors the four movements of the Ninth Symphony itself (opening, scherzo, slow movement, finale).

After the fanfare, Beethoven begins the first of these sections by evoking the past: the themes of the first three movements appear, only to be emphatically rejected by the dramatic recitative of the cellos and basses. The first two-measure fragment of the "Ode to Joy" theme, however, is greeted by a recitative in a completely different tone as the tonality changes to a bright D Major.

The "Ode to Joy" theme is first played by the cellos and basses without any accompaniment. It is subsequently joined by several countermelodies (including a particularly striking one in the bassoon) and finally repeated triumphantly by the entire orchestra. Then the music suddenly stops and the Schreckensfanfare unexpectedly returns, followed by the entrance of the baritone soloist who takes up the last phrase of the earlier instrumental recitative to lead into the vocal presentation of the "Ode to Joy." As before, during the instrumental variations, the melody grows and grows in volume and excitement until (at the words Und der Cherub steht vor Gott) there is a new interruption.

The second major section of the movement starts here, with the scherzo-like "Turkish march" for tenor solo and a battery of percussion instruments. It has been dubbed the "Turkish march" because of a musical style influenced by the Turkish janissary bands popular in Vienna at the time (the same influence can be found in several works by Mozart, including the opera The Abduction from the Seraglio). The theme of the "Turkish march" is. of course, a variation on the "Ode to Joy" melody. This episode is followed by an orchestral interlude in the form of a fugue, also based on the "Ode to Joy." The melody is recapitulated in its original form by the orchestra and chorus, and then the music stops again. In the third section (the "slow chorus introduce a new theme (Seid umschlungen, Millionen). If the "Ode" celebrated the divine nature of Joy, this melody represents the Deity in its awe-inspiring, cosmic aspect. Whereas the first theme proceeded entirely in small steps, the second one is characterized by wide leaps; this sudden expansion in the dimensions of the melody conjures up a sense of the infinite and God's throne above the starry skies.

The last section begins with the two themes heard simultaneously in what David Levy calls a "symbolic contrapuntal union of the sacred and the profane." The solo quartet returns to the first strophe of Schiller's poem: once more, the music starts anew to rise to new heights of joyful energy. Three slow sections intervene to delay this final ascent; the second of these (an adagio cadenza for the four solo singers) momentarily brings back memories of the symphony's slow movement. But finally, nothing can stop the music from reaching a state of ecstasy. After the last unison 'D' in measure 940, the journey is completed and there is nothing left to say.

Program notes by Peter Laki.

Text by Ludwig van Beethoven and Friederich Schiller

O Freunde, nicht diese Töne! Sondern lasst uns angenehmere anstimmen, und freudenvollere.

Freude, schöner Götterfunken, Tochter aus Elysium, Wir betreten feuertrunken, Himmlische, dein Heiligtum. Deine Zauber binden wieder Was die Mode streng geteilt, Alle Menschen werden Brüder Wo dein sanfter Flügel weilt.

Wem der grosse Wurf gelungen, Eines Freundes Freund zu sein, Wer ein holdes Weib errungen, Mische seinen Jubel ein! Ja, wer auch nur eine Seele Sein nennt auf der Erden rund! Und wer's nie gekonnt, der stehle Weinend sich aus diesem Bund.

Freude trinken alle Wesen An den Brüsten der Natur, Alle Guten, alle Bösen Folgen ihrer Rosenspur. Küsse gab sie uns und Reben, Einen Freund, geprüft im Tod, Wollust ward dem Wurm gegeben, Und der Cherub steht vor Gott.

Froh, wie seine Sonnen fliegen Durch des Himmels prächt'gen Plan, Laufet, Brüder, eure Bahn, Freudig, wie ein Held zum Siegen.

Seid umschlungen, Millionen! Diesen Kuss der ganzen Welt! Brüder! überm Sternenzelt Muss ein lieber Vater wohnen. O friends, not these sounds! Let us sing more pleasant and more joyful ones instead!

Joy, beautiful divine spark, daughter from Paradise, We enter, drunk with fire, Heavenly One, into your sanctuary. Your magic reunites what daily life Has rigorously kept apart, All men become brothers Wherever your gentle wings abide.

Anyone who has been greatly fortunate To be a true friend to a friend, Each man who has found a gracious wife, Should rejoice with us! Yes, anyone who can claim but a single soul As his or her own in all the world! But anyone who has known none of this, must steal away, Weeping, from our company.

All beings drink of Joy At Nature's breasts, All good creatures, all evil creatures Follow her rosy path. She has given us kisses and vines, A friend loyal unto death, Pleasure has been given to the worm, And the angel stands before God.

Happily, as his suns fly Across the sky's magnificent expanse, Hurry, brothers, along your path, Joyfully, like a hero to the conquest.

Be embraced, you millions! This kiss for the entire world! Brothers — beyond the starry canopy A loving Father must dwell. Ihr stürzt nieder, Millionen? Ahnest du den Schöpfer, Welt? Such ihn überm Sternenzelt, Über Sternen muss er wohnen. Do you fall on your knees, you millions? Do you sense the Creator, world? Seek Him above the starry canopy, Beyond the stars must He dwell.

The Budapest Festival Orchestra (BFO) is one of the major success stories of the international music scene, being rated among the world's top 10 orchestras. Its key figure is music director Iván Fischer who, alongside Zoltán Kocsis, was one of the Orchestra's founding fathers. The BFO's unique system works to encourage the artistic qualities of its musicians to blend together, forming an exquisitely homogenous orchestral sound. Both audience and critics alike acknowledge the quality in the ensemble's captivating chamber music performances, as well as the all-pervasive dynamism with which it shares the joy of music making with the audience.

Over the decades, the BFO has presented the Hungarian audience with such stars as Sir Georg Solti — who until his death was principal guest conductor of the BFO, as well as great musicians such as Yehudi Menuhin, Pinchas Zukerman, Gidon Kremer, Radu Lupu, Sándor Végh, Sir András Schiff, and Richard Goode. Maestro Fischer also makes great efforts to invite young, internationally-acclaimed musicians and singers to perform for domestic audiences.

The Orchestra is a regular guest at the world's most important music venues and concert halls, including Carnegie Hall and the Lincoln Center in New York, Vienna's Musikverein, the Royal Concertgebouw in Amsterdam, and London's Royal Albert Hall. They have repeatedly been invited to perform at international music events such as the Mostly Mozart Festival, the Salzburger Festspiele, and the Edinburgh International Festival.

The Orchestra's famous Music Marathons and its own Bridging Europe Festival, focusing on the culture of a different nation every year, are organized in partnership with Müpa Budapest, one of the leading cultural institutions in Hungary. Opera performances, directed by Maestro Fischer, are also staged as joint productions; following the highlyacclaimed renditions of Don Giovanni and The Marriage of Figaro, they recently performed The Magic Flute.

Since 2014, the Orchestra has been dedicating itself to Community Weeks of free concerts given in nursing homes, churches, abandoned synagogues, and child-care institutions. The Orchestra regularly plays to young audiences, including Cocoa Concerts for the youngest and "Choose Your Instrument" programs for primary school children. They hold frequent film competitions for secondary school students, while making efforts to reach out to young adults too - not least through the highly successful Midnight Music series. Their innovative concerts include Dancing on the Square, one of the Orchestra's priority projects, which is as much about communal creativity, tolerance, and equal opportunities as it is about music and dance. The autismfriendly Cocoa Concerts are another of their major initiatives, providing a safe environment for children living with autism and their families alike.

Over the years, the BFO has received the highest accolades. In 2008, internationallyrenowned music critics rated the orchestra the ninth best in the world. The Orchestra's albums have twice won Gramophone Awards, while their rendition of Mahler's First Symphony was nominated for a 2013 Grammy Award. In 2014, the recording of Mahler's Symphony No. 5 received wide acclaim, being awarded both the Diapason d'Or and Italy's Toblacher Komponierhäuschen for "Best Mahler Recording."

Iván Fischer (conductor) is the founder and music director of the Budapest Festival Orchestra (BFO), as well as the music director of the Konzerthaus and Konzerthausorchester Berlin. In recent years he has also gained a reputation as a composer, with his works being performed in the US, the Netherlands, Belgium, Hungary, Germany, and Austria. He has also directed a number of successful opera productions. The BFO's frequent worldwide tours and a series of critically-acclaimed and fast-selling records, released first by Philips Classics and later by Channel Classics, have contributed to Maestro Fischer's reputation as one of the world's most high-profile music directors.

Maestro Fischer has guest conducted the Berlin Philharmonic more than 10 times: spends two weeks with Amsterdam's Royal Concertgebouw Orchestra annually; and as a conductor, he is also a frequent guest of the leading US symphonic orchestras, including the New York Philharmonic and the Cleveland Orchestra, As music director, he has led the Kent Opera and the Opéra National de Lyon, and was principal conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra in Washington, DC. Many of his recordings have been awarded prestigious international prizes. He studied piano, violin, and later the cello and composition in Budapest, before continuing his education in Vienna where he studied conducting under Hans Swarowsky.

Maestro Fischer is a founder of the Hungarian Mahler Society and Patron of the British Kodály Academy. He has received the Golden Medal Award from the President of the Republic of Hungary, and the Crystal Award from the World Economic Forum for his services in promoting international cultural relations. The government of the French Republic made him Chevalier de L'Ordre des Arts et des Lettres. In 2006 he was honored with the Kossuth Prize, Hungary's most prestigious arts award. In 2011 he received the Royal Philharmonic Society Music Award, Hungary's Prima Primissima Prize, and the Dutch Ovatie Prize. In 2013 he was accorded Honorary Membership to the Royal Academy of Music in London. In 2015 he was presented with the Abu Dhabi Festival Award.

Formed in 1879 by a group of local university and townspeople who gathered together for the study of Handel's Messiah. the UMS Choral Union has performed with many of the world's distinguished orchestras and conductors in its 138year history. First led by Professor Henry Simmons Frieze and then conducted by Professor Calvin Cady, the group has performed Handel's Messiah in Ann Arbor annually since its first Messiah performance in December 1879. Based in Ann Arbor under the aegis of UMS and led by Scott Hanoian, the 175-voice Choral Union is known for its definitive performances of large-scale works for chorus and orchestra.

The UMS Choral Union's 2016–17 season began with its annual performances of Handel's Messiah at Hill Auditorium with the Ann Arbor Symphony. In March, Scott Hanoian will lead the chorus and Ann Arbor Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Beethoven's Missa Solemnis at Hill Auditorium, followed by a reprise performance with the Toledo Symphony and Stefan Sanderling in April at the Toledo Museum of Art's Peristyle. Women of the UMS Choral Union will join the Ann Arbor Symphony Orchestra and Arie Lipsky in March for a performance of Debussy's Nocturnes, and will end the season in May with performances of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony with the Detroit Symphony and Leonard Slatkin.

The UMS Choral Union was a participant chorus in a rare performance and recording of William Bolcom's Songs of Innocence and of Experience in Hill Auditorium in April 2004 under the baton of Leonard Slatkin. Naxos Records released a three-disc set of this recording in October 2004, featuring the UMS Choral Union and U-M School of Music, Theatre & Dance ensembles, The recording won four Grammy Awards in 2006, including "Best Choral Performance" and "Best Classical Album." The recording was also selected as one of The New York Times "Best Classical Music CDs of 2004." Other recent highlights include a Grammynominated recording project with the U-M School of Music.
